Rejuvenating your reflective practice is all about setting yourself up for success with some proper planning and preparation. What do you know about your students, what does that tell you that they need, how can you help them to get them there, how will you re-evaluate progress along the way? Remember that you and your students are on a learning journey together and reflecting is part of that learning process.

What is a practical tip from your presentation for teachers to carry into the start of the school year?

One practical tip to start the school year with is learn everyone's name and don't move on from teaching protocols and procedures until everyone is ready. It will help you in the long run the stronger you build your relationship foundation.
